I was hoping you already had the data for 2016 from doing the other maps so it would not be hard.

I assume you mean for 2017?

I think we have maps already for years prior, but I'm not sure if those maps use numbers of violent crimes or what. Dr. McCutcheon is the resident mapping expert, so I will ask him what he already has.

It would be most illustrative to have one map for each year rather than adding all years together on one map (although that would tell something in and of itself).

If we can clarify what would be most useful and make sure we have the data, Max can probably make the map(s).

Angie,

Can you take a look at this when you get back to see what is possible ? (Ben is referring to the U of M homicide study.)

ignore if burdensome but it would be nice to see a map like on your web site that shows the number of violent crimes by precinct. Your map was homicides or youth violent crime and all tied to averages. The absolute numbers may give comfort to those that crime is very narrowly based from geographic perspective. Again, don't do if a lot of trouble. Happy New Year!
